Keynote: Congruent Leadership: Guiding Others Through Uncertain Times by Leading Yourself First

Beauvert Ballroom

Mark Groves

Congruent Leadership: Guiding Others Through Uncertain Times by Leading Yourself First We are living in a moment of profound transition. Institutions are shifting, expectations are rising, and the leaders in higher education are being asked to guide people through environments that feel increasingly uncertain and complex. In times like these, leadership is no longer primarily by authority or expertise. It is defined by internal coherence. This keynote explores the idea that the most powerful form of leadership begins with stewardship of the self. Drawing from neuroscience, relational dynamics, and the anthropology of liminal spaces, this talk reframes leadership as the capacity to ...

Strengthening Bargaining Through Member Engagement

Please note: Capacity 70 - Adding this session to your calendar does not guarantee a seat. Seating is first-come, first-served

Mary Schaffer Ballroom C

Shauna MacDonald
President NASA/President ACIFA, NAIT/ACIFA

In the last round of bargaining, the NAIT Academic Staff Association (NASA) made a deliberate shift toward a more open, organized, and member-driven approach. Earlier in the process, NASA implemented major changes including open and large bargaining committees, strengthened communications, and bylaw reforms designed to increase transparency and engagement. These changes laid the groundwork for a new kind of bargaining culture, one where members were informed, involved, and prepared to act collectively. This session will briefly revisit those structural changes before focusing on what came next: the organizing that led to a successful strike vote. Through coordinated communications, clear messaging about ...
